Haverhill search

The suspect / HAVERHILL POLICE

Police seek alleged child stalker

Haverhill police are trying to find a man who allegedly stalked a young girl in a supermarket and took an inappropriate photo of her on his cell phone Monday afternoon.

The man allegedly followed a woman and her 7-year-old daughter into a Market Basket, then used his cell phone to take a picture up her skirt.

He's described as a white male, between 25 and 35 years old, with light-colored hair. GLOBE

Road rage

Man's jaw broken in Quincy

A Randolph man was arrested Tuesday after an apparent road rage incident left a driver with a broken jaw.

Phillip Vasialka, 30, followed David Bazer, 25, to a gas station after he witnessed Bazer speeding down his street, according to police.

Vasialka allegedly punched Bazer twice in the face, breaking his jaw.

Bazer's mother said he will need significant surgery and may never recover feeling in his lower jaw. METRO

The chaotic scene forced street closures that extended from Talbot Ave. to St. Mark's Road while officers conducted a four-hour search of the neighborhoods.

Manhunt follows deadly cop shootout

Dorchester manhunt. Two Boston Police officers were shot Wednesday during an undercover drug investigation.

One man was killed and another was being still being sought as of press time Wednesday after the pair allegedly shot two undercover Boston Police officers in Dorchester.

The shootout happened around 1:45 p.m., after the officers approached the men at 1500 Dorchester Ave. and one of the men pulled a gun.

The shooting suspect was shot by police and later died, and the second suspect fled on foot toward Ashmont Station. Both officers sustained non-life threatening gunshot wounds to their legs.

It was not clear what caused the dispute.

"They came upon something that was going on and that's what we're trying to determine. Were these two individuals together doing something when a firearm was about to be used, or were they actually engaging each other when officers came upon them?" Boston Police Chief Daniel Linskey said at the scene Wednesday.

The second suspect was described as a light-skinned black male, with a slim build, a maroon shirt with stripes and braided hair, police said. Police were unsure whether the surviving suspect fired any shots.

"It could be that he was a victim in this and ran from the gun battle, but at least he was doing some nefarious acts that caused some concerns for the officers," Linskey said.

The officers were part of the Drug Control Unit, and that they were in the area for a separate investigation.

Dot streets shut down

After the shootout, a road closure extended from Talbot Avenue to St. Mark's Road while officers conducted a four-hour search on foot throughout the area.

- Chief Linksey said police were conducting a suspect search "along the path of flight," and were also looking for any kind of weapon that may have been dropped.
- They were also checking video surveillance.

Hex threat. Woman threatens police officer with a voodoo curse

An Everett woman arrested for DUI after crashing into a Boston Globe truck Monday threatened to put a voodoo hex on her arresting officer, according to a police report.

"She repeatedly called me a racist and told me she was from Haiti and she was gonna 'put voodoo on my white [expletive],'" trooper William Kokocinski wrote of Vivenzia Bellegarde, 25.

"She further explained that her name, translated, means 'give life take life.'" METRO

Trapped. Westborough man allegedly locks Verizon tech in vault

A Westborough storage unit owner faces kidnapping and larceny charges after he allegedly locked a Verizon worker in an underground vault.

Howard Cook, 71, was angry that the employee, Michael Hathaway, had driven on his grass Monday. So when Hathaway went into the vault to perform routine maintenance, Cook locked him in and placed two rocks on top. Hathaway called 911 from inside the vault and was released by police 10 minutes later. GLOBE

Street harassment

Hollaback! survey calls out Boston cat-callers

For the first time since launching 18 months ago, Hollaback! Boston is hosting a survey to gather data about street harassment in the city.

The organization, which is dedicated to eradicating street harassment, launched the two-minute "State of the Streets" survey on its website last week.

Hollaback! Boston founders
COURTNEY SACCO, METRO

Since then, about 170 people have responded, and according to Britni de la Cretaz, a founding member of Hollaback! Boston, hundreds more are expected to weigh in.

"We are at the point where we've been around long enough, and want to make some changes and get in contact with policy-makers, but we need numbers and evidence to show that [street harassment] is happening in Boston," she said.

The survey is open to people of all ages and genders, she said. It will remain open on www.boston.ihollaback.org until Aug. 31.

Artist Matthew Ritchie will create the next Dewey Square mural, a preliminary mock-up of which is seen in the background. / JENNIFER TAYLOR

New mural coming to Dewey Sq.

Public art. A giant abstract painting will replace the current Os Gemeos mural.

By mid-September the colorful and at times controversial Os Gemeos mural in Dewey Square will be replaced by an abstract, black, white and gray painting that draws inspiration from Boston's history and waterfront.

British-born artist Matthew Ritchie's mural, tentatively titled "Remanence: Salt and Light," will be the second public art partnership between the Institute of Contemporary Art and the Greenway, following the Os Gemeos mural in 2012.

"We'll have something new for the public to love, or hate, or talk about," said curator Jenelle Porter. "That's the wonderful thing about public art — it creates conversation."

The mural will resemble a seascape at the bottom, from which dark lines will connect to objects that appear to be floating atoms or globes.

Ritchie bases much of his work off of scientific principles, said Porter, who described "Remanence" as a bit of a diagram.

"The drawing very much keeps with the rest of his work," she said.

Starting the week of Sept. 16., about 10 professional sign painters will hand paint the 70-foot by 70-foot surface.

The public artwork will remain there for at least a year, and no longer than 18 months, Porter said.

"Public art is a wonderful way to support art and artists," she said. "I'm sad to see [the Os Gemeos mural] go, but the great thing about this is that it's not permanent. I think people will love it."

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Backlash throwback

The Os Gemeos mural currently on display at Dewey Square sparked hundreds of racially-fueled comments on social media last year. Critics slammed the mural for depicting what they believed to be a Muslim in a hijab. The American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts condemned the comments.

- The Brazilian artists, twin brothers, said the mural actually depicts a boy in pajamas with a shirt on his head.

Whitey trial. Questions, suspense as Bulger jury deliberations continue

The second day of jury deliberations in the trial of James "Whitey" Bulger consisted of multiple questions from the jurors and a couple hours of suspense that ended without a clear reason.

The jury deciding the fate of the 83-year-old alleged former mob boss began and ended its day by passing questions on notes to the judge. But in between, there was some suspense and speculation created by the actions inside the courtroom.

Judge Denise Casper called lawyers from both sides to a sidebar at about noon. U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz was present in the courtroom, causing speculation among many court observers and media on Twitter that Bulger or a juror had fallen ill, that a verdict was imminent or that a juror was being dismissed.

The suspense and speculation was only furthered when the lawyers and judge left the sidebar and courtroom without any explanation.

Later on, they came back into the courtroom where the same scenario played out. Finally, shortly before 2:30 p.m., the lawyers and judge left again, seemingly resolving the issue but providing no explanation.

Jurors were continuing their deliberations elsewhere in the courthouse.

As for the inquiries, the jury asked for clarification on statute of limitations, aiding and abetting and what was necessary to find Bulger guilty of the second racketeering count.

The jurors also asked for additional copies of Casper's instructions.

Jurors were to return to court Thursday after being unable to reach a verdict since deliberations began on Tuesday. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Frustrating day

For the families of Bulger's alleged victims, the wait for a verdict has not been pleasant.

- "It was a frustrating day here," said Tommy Donahue, speaking to reporters after the second day of deliberations. His father, Michael, was alleged gunned down by Bulger in 1982.
- "It's leaving everybody in suspense. It's lousy, to be honest with you," he said.

The street was shut down for a brief time while authorities inspected the item before it was taken away. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Congress wins relief on Obamacare subsidies

Congress has partially wriggled free from the "Obamacare" health reforms that it passed and subjected itself to three years ago.

In a ruling issued on Wednesday, U.S. lawmakers and their staffs will continue to receive a federal contribution toward the health insurance that they must purchase through soon-to-open exchanges created by President Barack Obama's signature healthcare law.

The decision by the Office of Personnel Management, with Obama's blessing, will prevent the largely unintended loss of healthcare benefits for 535 members of the Senate and House of Representatives and thousands of Capitol Hill staff.

Obama cancels meeting with Putin over Snowden decision

Obama and officials debated whether to go ahead with the Moscow visit to give Obama the opportunity to outline his concerns to Putin face-to-face, but decided to express displeasure publicly by canceling. / GETTY IMAGES

Backing him up. Obama received vocal support from Democrats and GOP for the decision.

President Barack Obama on Wednesday abruptly canceled a Moscow summit with President Vladimir Putin planned for next month in a retaliation for Russia's decision to grant asylum to fugitive Edward Snowden.

The cancellation marks a stark low point in U.S.-Russian relations in the years since Obama embarked on a "reset" in ties to try to gain more diplomatic cooperation, only to find that deep differences remain.

"Following a careful review begun in July, we have reached the conclusion that there is not enough recent progress in our bilateral agenda with Russia to hold a U.S.-Russia summit in early September," White House spokesman Jay Carney said in a statement.

Speaking with reporters in a phone conference, Putin's foreign policy aide Yuri Ushakov said the cancellation was caused by the dispute between the two countries over Snowden.

He said Russia's invitation for Obama to visit Russia still stood.

Beyond Snowden, however, a long list of grievances separate the two governments, topped by Russia's support for Syrian President Bashar al-Assad in Syria's civil war.

"The real issue here is that the U.S.-Russian relationship has been adrift since 2011," said Andrew Weiss, a Russian expert at Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Kremlin

Russia 'disappointed' by Obama cancellation

President Barack Obama's decision to cancel a planned meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin is disappointing, but he is still welcome in Russia, a top Kremlin foreign policy aide said.

"We are disappointed by the U.S. administration's decision to cancel the visit of President Obama to Moscow planned in early September," Putin's foreign policy aide, Yuri Ushakov, told reporters.

"My overall experience was very positive. Weekend classes were convenient, and faculty members were well-prepared and passionate about the areas of law they dealt with. They even helped me create a new résumé, enabling me to obtain a job within a week of graduation."

Hey honey, what's for dinner tonight? Bugs

Bugs are a bit harder on the outside and like soft meat on the inside. / METRO WORLD NEWS

Fly food. A new kitchen device produces insects that are ready to eat.

With the population growing, the need for alternative food sources to feed billions is dire. Industrial designer Katharina Unger believes she has a solution to the problem: She thinks we should all eat bugs.
Unger's device, Farm 432, allows people to cultivate and harvest their own edible fly larvae. We talked to the creator about the project and why we should start considering insects as part of a balanced meal.

Most people say "Ew, bugs!" What makes them such a good snack?
They contain lots of protein, amino acids and calcium. We tend to have negative associations with them, but if you look at them just like you do at any other sort of food it makes sense to eat them. They can be raised sustainably — some of them, like my larvae, can be fed on biowaste and are therefore very cost efficient in terms of resources. And they taste good! I just had a barbecue this weekend where I served some and my friends and family loved them!

What does fly larvae taste like?
A bit meaty and nutty. They are a bit harder on the outside and like soft meat on the inside. When you cook them, they smell a bit like cooked potatoes, starchy.

Have you ever tried to cater a three-course dinner using bugs as your main protein?
Yes, I cooked a three-course dinner with the larvae once. I had fly in soup as starter, tortellini a la larva as main and larve au chocolate as dessert.

Do you have a favorite bug-based meal?
It's the larvae tomato risotto I always recommend: a lot of tomatoes mixed with wild rice and parboiled rice, a bit of Parmesan cheese and basil. It turns out as a delicious meal!

Bugging out

Where did you come up with this idea?

It was my graduation project. I started to research about factory farming in general. I felt I could only do something with alternative food sources, as otherwise I would end up contributing to this dysfunctional system. So I looked into alternatives, and that´s when insects became interesting to me. I researched the various kinds of insects and how they are raised, and the black soldier fly turned out as the most efficient for my purpose (due to its specific life cycle).

Demolished. Wrecking crew razes Cleveland home of Ariel Castro

Wrecking crews on Wednesday demolished a rundown Cleveland house where three young women were imprisoned and tortured by Ariel Castro for about a decade.

An aunt of Gina DeJesus, one of the three abducted and held captive by Castro, took the first swipe at the house shortly after 7 a.m., operating a hydraulic excavator with assistance as a crowd swarmed the site, snapping photographs and applauding.

DeJesus' mother, Nancy Ruiz, cheered as the huge arm on a heavy demolition truck ripped into the pink room where her daughter had been held and fed through a hole in the door, County Executive Ed FitzGerald told Reuters. Reporters had limited access to the site.

The longest-held captive, Michelle Knight, 32, arrived at the house with a bunch of yellow balloons and watched as the home of her tormentor was torn to the ground.

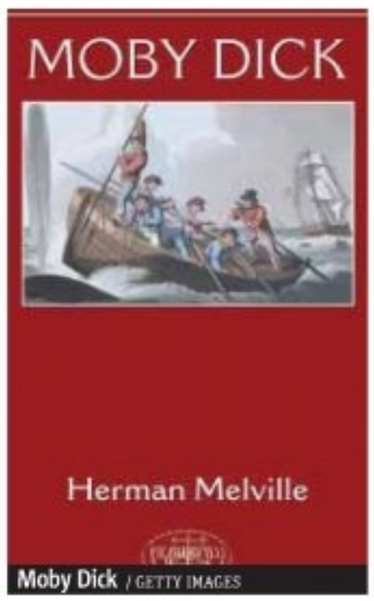
CNN = POLITICS

I'LL MAKE IT SHORT

Articles have prattled on about how young people are growing up in a world in which no written thought will require more than 140 characters, no video will last more than 16 seconds and even fast food will be faster. Well, good luck — but I'm not convinced about all of this. Sure, "Gilligan's Island" may be able to withstand this sort of intellectual drive-by shooting (how hard is it to grasp the idea of seven people stuck on a pile of sand, even if one is Mr. Howell?) but other works could pose greater challenges.

Still, in the spirit of intergenerational cooperation, I've been Twitter-cising some of humankind's greatest literary accomplishments so that the wisdom of ages will not be lost on the texting-at-birth set.

#MobyDick — Call me Ishmael. But seriously, call me, because if my boss keeps me chasing this whale around one more week, I am out of here.



Moby Dick / GETTY IMAGES

#ATaleOfTwoCities — It was the best of times, it was the worst of times. Like when I dated that girl in college, am I right, Chuck?

#HuckleberryFinn — Homelessness has been around a long while. But apparently if you have a raft, it can be kind of fun!

#AnnaKarenina — Anna? Are you OK? I've messaged you like a hundred times.

#ToKillAMockingbird — Honestly, this has nothing to do with ornithology. Just saying.

#TheGreatGatsby — Jay meet Daisy. Daisy, Jay. Nice party. And WTH? Was that a car crash down by the filling station?

#TheSunAlsoRises — And then it sets, then rises again and then sets. Meanwhile, we fish and talk. BTW: Why is Jake so cranky?

#TheIliad — FYI, Brad Pitt is pretty good with a sword, but he has weak ankles.

It's just a start and I'm open to suggestions, but if we're going to reduce the culture of all humanity to 140-character bursts we'd better get on it. After all, maybe Tolstoy had time on his hands, but the kids these days? It seems they are quite busy.

We invest, train and develop our people.

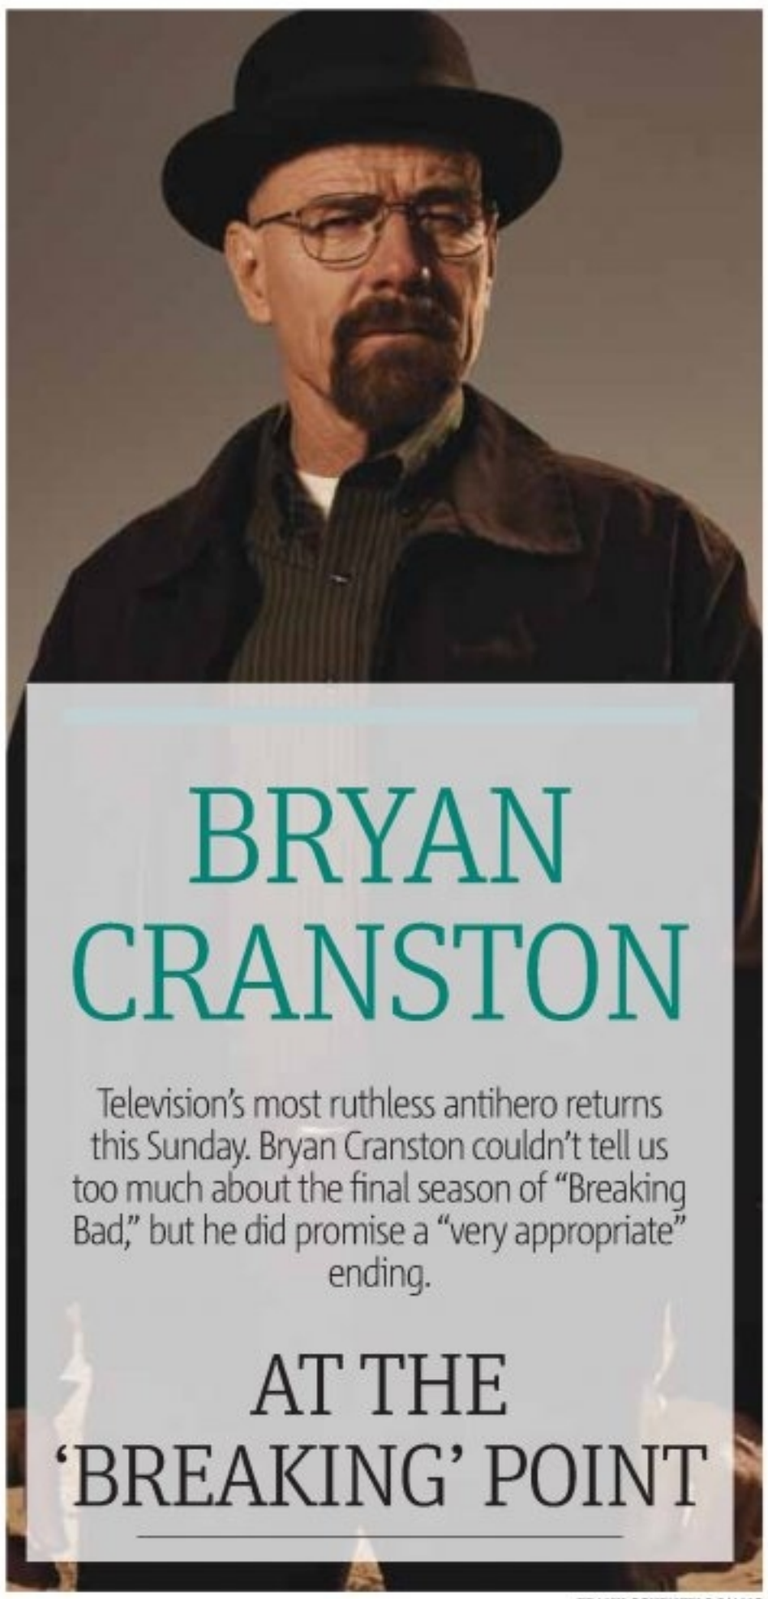
On Skyler

'She wanted to protect her family.'

There's a lot of backlash on the show against Skyler. Will she be redeemed, in a sense, in these final eight episodes?

You know, to me, when I look objectively, I've always liked Skyler, because the reason she had [issues] with Walt was because Walt was lying to her. She wanted to protect her family. ... Fans were rooting for him and ... she represented an obstacle for his success. ... It really puts an ambiguity in the hearts and souls of the audience. [They're] going, "Wait a minute, what am I rooting for? Why am I rooting for this man?" It fills them with anxiety. There's drama in the show as well as in the audience. It's pretty amazing.



BRYAN CRANSTON

Television's most ruthless antihero returns this Sunday. Bryan Cranston couldn't tell us too much about the final season of "Breaking Bad," but he did promise a "very appropriate" ending.

AT THE 'BREAKING' POINT

FRANK OCKENFELS 3/AMC

It might have been the most epic bathroom break in television history.

If you're not caught up on "Breaking Bad," you might want to stop reading here. But if you are caught up, you know that last season's cliffhanging finale ended with DEA agent Hank Schrader picking up some very special reading material while on the toilet — evidence to incriminate his brother-in-law, Walter White, for orchestrating the drug ring Schrader has had his eyes on since the first season.

While you might have been waiting with baited breath to find out what happens when Hank comes out of that bathroom, Bryan Cranston tells Metro he wasn't.

"I didn't ask for the whole year," says Cranston, who has played the series' lead Walter White since 2008.

Fans won't have to wait much longer to discover what happens next, as the series returns for its final eight episodes beginning Sunday. Cranston himself was mum about the series finale when we spoke to him last month. But he did share plenty of insight into a series he calls a "cautionary tale," about a man whose hunger for power just couldn't be satiated.

So, how are you feeling these days — happy, excited, sad, nervous?
Go on, you're hitting them all. Yeah, you know, we're proud that we were able to get the support from Sony and AMC to be able to write the conclusion that [creator Vince Gilligan] wanted, in the amount of episodes that he felt was appropriate. He was able to do these last eight episodes without feeling like he was diluting the storyline or compressing it so much.

How many people know the ending right now?
Maybe about 20. It's gonna go up to about 200. … There are several things that happen, as you might guess, in the last eight — many twists and turns that you will gasp at.

It feels like it can't end well for Walt.
I don't know if it ends badly or not. You're fishing, aren't you?

All right, all right. But last Walt was seen, he was out of the business and about to get his life back on track. That must be wishful thinking.
Yeah, I mean, it is "Breaking Bad," so what happens in these last eight is what's happened in the previous 54 episodes, or whatever the case is — that we go through unapologetically. [We] tell our stories as honestly as we can and present it to fans. And it's been overwhelming, from critics and audiences alike, that it's resonating.

Yeah, why do you think that is? People from all walks of life really connect to this show.
Well, I think because it's honest. We're exploring sociopolitical relationships. Some people were gleaning that, "Oh, this is a condemnation of the medical care system in the United States, because here's a man who is a teacher, and a well educated man, and he cannot provide for his family." … We are telling this story in that manner that is resonating with people because it's not about drug manufacturing or drug usage; this story is about decisions that people make and the slippery slope that [can] happen.

Are you happy with Walt's ending?
You know, there was apprehension of reading the last episode because once you read the last episode, there's no more episodes to read — it's just like, whoa, I don't want it to end. But I can honestly say that fans of our show will be very satisfied... It's very "Breaking Bad" — unapologetic and very appropriate.

Inside Walt's mind

Turning the knob

Which Walt is harder for you to tap into: cancer-patient family man or merciless Heisenberg?
Neither, to be honest with you. ... I know that there's less than savory characteristics in my being and I have to let that out. ... Whether it's anger or jealously or resentment or whatever negative components [of your] personality, you have to admit it. ... And then you say, well, let's turn the knob and allow that to become the worst case scenario.

A part-robot Matt Damon wields a futuristic gun in "Elysium." / KIMBERLEY FRENCH

'Elysium' is better when it's dumb

Political gore fest. The "District 9" director does more of the same, but with Matt Damon.

If at first you succeed, try again. "Elysium," filmmaker Neill Blomkamp's swollen Hollywood cash-in for "Direct 9," is more or less the same thing: a blunt political parable involving outer space that turns delightfully gory — and involves a souped-up man-machine. Like "District 9" and its send-up of apartheid South Africa, "Elysium" — a look at chasmal class divide — isn't deep-thinking. It's maximalist politicizing — big and sloppy, and distracting enough to take one's mind off shortcomings of its polemic.

In "Elysium," the rich have dwell in the titular satellite, which looks like a spinning Beverly Hills. Poor minorities remain on an arid Earth, although our hero is a Caucasian Matt Damon with a vaguely Mexican name. After suffering radiation poisoning at his crap job, Damon's Max DeCosta tries to sneak up to Elysium, where any and all wounds/diseases/lesions are swiftly healed.

"District 9"'s Sharlto Copley soon reappears, this time as the main antagonist. He's is almost as manic as he was in the first film, only this time his unpredictable, unpolished schtick is used for an unsettling combination of anarchism and self-interest.

This, like "District 9," is all building to a climax where whatever smart and topical messages it meant to convey take a backseat to awe-inspiring destruction. This is a good thing. Blomkamp is great at devising oddly beautiful ways to destroy human bodies. People don't just die in a Blomkamp film — they burst into bloody messes. DeCosta's arc, learning to care about more than himself, is stock, but the script knows how to milk its genre ideas in inventive ways. (Rarely has the idea of bringing back a presumed-dead character been this inspired.) Like "District 9," "Elysium" is thrilling when it turns off its brain and just blows stuff up real good.

A have defending the have-nots

Interview. "Elysium"'s Matt Damon talks getting buff and voting against his self-interests.

When Matt Damon saw himself on-screen in "Elysium" — after months of dieting and four-hour gym sessions to get him into sci-fi action hero shape — all he could do was laugh.

"It just looked ridiculous to me," he says. "It's so indulgent, but it's part of the magic trick. I understood why [director Neill Blomkamp] needed me to look like that to establish the character. He didn't want any fat on me because he said, 'I want you to look almost Haitian, like you're incredibly fit, but you've been working so hard and perhaps you've missed some meals.'"

While it worked for the film, Damon was happy to let the workout regimen lapse.

"It's just not a natural way for somebody to look. These people who look that way are either genetic freaks or they're just living in a gym," he says.

"[My wife] was fine with me buff, but she was fine with me [40 pounds overweight] on 'The Informant!' I think she likes variety."

While he might not find it easy to relate to the look of his character, Max — an ex-con factory worker taking on the rich and powerful on their satellite sanctuary, Elysium, orbiting the ravaged slum Earth has become — he can at least understand him emotionally and intellectually. "He's doing the best he can in a world that's getting increasingly difficult to live in," Damon says.

"A lot of people can relate to that in this prolonged economic downturn, where it feels like the world keeps putting its boot on your neck a little more forcefully every day."

Speaking of the current state of the world, Damon has never been one to shy away from addressing political issues, and "Elysium" offers him a great chance to talk immigration — one of the major themes in the film.

"Look, it's a nation of immigrants and I'm from a family of immigrants, so yeah, clearly they're going to have to figure that one out," he says.

"But the politicians don't talk about it at all. They just see it as an issue where with the polling on it, they're just confused on which way to go. So the Republicans just send out Marco Rubio to speak Spanish to everybody."

Not to suggest, though, that Damon thinks he has all the answers: "I don't have a comprehensive immigration plan, no," he says. "But I can work on it."

How the other half lives

As for relating to the have-nots, like his character in the film? "F— them," Damon offers, with a laugh. "No, at least in my case, I think the values that I have are consistent with the values I was raised with. I vote against my own self-interests constantly. If you're born with a silver spoon in your mouth, you're probably more likely to be the Koch brothers and think that you shouldn't pay taxes on things."

Nick Offerman helps save the day (again)

Weed comedy.
"We're the Millers" is a Farrelly Brothers comedy for a post-Farrelly Brothers world.

Jason Sudeikis gets a manly ear tickle from Nick Offerman in "We're the Millers." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Review

'We're the Millers'

Director: Rawson Marshall Thurber

Stars: Jason Sudeikis, Jennifer Aniston

Grade: R

Marijuana slows down the reflexes, which is why it's rarely ideal for comedy. Wisely, no character gets high in "We're the Millers," even if the setup is almost the same as Cheech and Chong's "Up in Smoke."

Jason Sudeikis plays an aging, low-rent drug dealer forced to smuggle herb across the border. To better throw "the man" off his scent, he gets a bland haircut, switches to a sunnier mien and rounds up some local lowlifes — including a surly stripper (Jennifer Aniston) and a street kid (Emma Roberts) — to pose as a Winnebago-wielding suburban family.

The script for "We're the Millers" has been in development hell since the mid-aughts, which is probably why it actually has a shape, as well as a parade of old-fashioned gross-out gags. Scenes where these pros — including Nick Offerman and Kathryn Hahn as actual vacationing suburbanites — simply riff are preferable to set pieces where, say, a poisonous spider bite enlarges the testicles of the nice guy "son" ("Son of Rambow" ace Will Poulter). But even these sequences have a pleasing form, thanks to the performers and director Rawson Marshall Thurber, who, as in "Dodgeball," knows how to pace jokes, gags and even should-be-lame sequences.

The Woodman and the Diceman: Together at last

Woody Allen flick. "Blue Jasmine" is a thrillingly uneasy mix of comedy and drama with Andrew Dice Clay.

Here's that Cate Blanchett, Sally Hawkins and Andrew Dice Clay film you wanted. / SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

With a few significant exceptions ("Manhattan," "Hannah and Her Sisters"), Woody Allen has maintained a thick wall separating his dramas from his comedies. One of the most likable things about "Blue Jasmine," his 43 1/3 directorial work, is that it's never one or the other. The subject is serious, tracking the fall and potential rise of a disgraced Manhattan socialite (Cate Blanchett). But the tone wavers between drama and (light) comedy — not in a clumsy way but in the manner of a confident master who isn't always this confident.

This is Allen's most ambitious film in ages, if not always his smoothest: The flashbacks can be artlessly integrated, while there's an undercurrent of distaste for the working class, who are portrayed as babbling grotesques. Of course, there's also distaste for the wealthy. As it becomes apparent, there's no way out for anyone.

THE WORD

Alexandra Cavallo takes on the world of gossip.

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO
alexandra.cavallo@metro.us

1 Charlie's Anal-gels

In "well, duh" news, TMZ reports that the three new additions to Charlie Sheen's harem, uh, bevy of women known as "Charlie's Angels" are former porn stars. Former hardcore porn stars. I don't find this to be particularly noteworthy because, um, what other kind of woman thinks that it's a pro move to sign up to serve as one of that loon's many fun-holes? If you were to tell me that they were former elementary school teachers or, say, members of the Senate, that would be news.

But no, they're former porn stars. On a side note, isn't it kind of weird that any person who has had sex on camera for money is referred to as a porn "star"? That's like calling Tori Spelling (am I aging myself here? Insert current D-List actor) a movie star. Porn makers, sure. Porn actors, if I'm being generous. Anyway, I digress.

The three new ladies are Jayme Langford, Jana Jordan and Celeste Star. Langford is perhaps best known for her roles in "Power Munch 3 and 5" which, OK, are great porn titles. You had me at Power Munch.

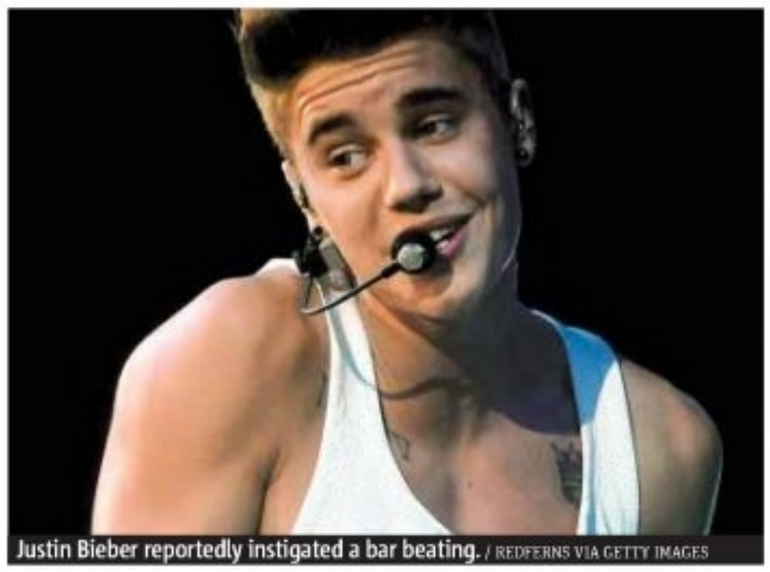
2 Russell Brand has loose lips

We all do it. There is not one person among us who — unless you're some preternatural super-being of chastity and light — while in bed with their significant other, has not let their mind stray to the naked body of another.

Monogamy is hard, you guys, and sometimes a little harmless fantasy makes the same-old routine of doing the horizontal soft shoe with our beloved just a little less ... same-old.

It's the little white lie of sexual congress but, like Fight Club, the first rule of fantasizing outside of your relationship is that you don't talk about it.

Russell Brand did not get that memo. Or, he got it, rolled it up and smoked drugs out of it. At a recent stand-up gig, Brand joked "I'd be having sex thinking, 'Think of anyone, anyone else.'" This was insult for the sake of comedy, so it can be forgiven. Unless, probably, you happen to be Katy Perry.



Justin Bieber reportedly instigated a bar beating. / REDFERNS VIA GETTY IMAGES

3 Bieber brawl

Last week I reported that Justin Bieber was denied access to a Meatpacking District nightclub for being too young (for being too terrible). This week, however, it appears that the boy wonder managed to talk (pay) his way into a Southampton nightclub. And then got kicked out for inciting a major brawl.

[Note: I'm imagining Bieber and his "posse" in LA Lights sneakers (I don't know why, just 'cause) and skinned knees, wrestling with another gang of ornery tykes, on a playground.]

But it was a lot more serious than that. Bieber, who is apparently on a mission to both prove he's "hard" and ruin his career, ordered his bodyguards to beat up a man identified as Wayne Rennalls, who ended up in the hospital.

Who is in charge of wrangling this kid? Really, I'd like to know. Because they're either bad at their job or on their own mission to destroy the Biebs. If the latter — carry on.

Club Monaco launches shoes

Shopping. The brand's debut includes leopard-print sandals and shiny slippers.

Club Monaco, our go-to for sophisticated pieces that look polished and cool at the workplace and beyond, just dipped its toes into footwear. On Monday, the brand launched a collection of shoes online that are handmade in Italy and range in price from $198.50 to $395.

"The strongest part is the quality," says Caroline Belhumeur, senior vice president of women's design. "The collection is distinguished by both the superior materials and craftsmanship."

Also high on Belhumeur's requirements: timeless designs.

Luxe materials including calf hair and python were used to create staples such as perfect-for-the-office pumps and pointy-toe flats.

"The best trend is a shoe that is classic," says Belhumeur. "Just like our apparel line, our shoes can work this season and still be worn seasons from now."

Q&A

Well-heeled

What was the inspiration for the shoe collection?
Consumers have a mild shoe obsession — and our customer has always asked us if they could buy the shoes we used in our lookbook and campaigns, so we figured why not make our own collection. We had a clear idea on the type of shapes we wanted and how they should fit — clean, timeless, chic shapes where we play with texture and color.

What styles do you think will be the most popular, and why?
The April pump was a strong aspect of the collection; it's a classic with a timeless shape. This shoe style can make skinny pants and skirts look fresh. I also love the Casey sandal. You can pair it with fuller skirts, and the style allows you to play with pattern and texture without overdoing the look.

AMBER MADISON

AMBERMADISONONLINE.COM

Amber Madison is a Manhattan-based trained therapist who specializes in dating and relationships and is currently taking on new clients. She is also the author of 'Are All Guys A—holes?' for which she traveled the country, spoke to more than 1,000 men and discovered that the answer to this question is no. You can follow her on Twitter: @ambermadi.

NICE GUYS FINISH FIRST — ONLINE

A few years ago I criss-crossed the country talking to guys about sex, love and dating as research for my book, "Are All Guys A—holes?" Something I heard repeatedly from guys all over was that "girls love a—holes." Through a combo of dating books, their own experiences and observing the success of friends around them, many guys are thoroughly convinced that nice guys finish last and as one put it, "being nice is a mistake."

Well listen up, guys, because the overly cocky pick-up artist d—bag angle is played out. Trust me when I tell you, girls want to be with guys who are sweet. According to an analysis of half a million first contact messages sent on the dating site OKCupid, considerate is in! Guys who sent a message with the words "sorry," "awkward" and "apologize" were all significantly more likely to get a response back.

I know what you're thinking, "But I had just perfected my 'I don't give a s— about you' texting response times!" Well, un-pop your collar and listen up.

Being "nice" has gotten a bad rap because it's a synonym for boring. It's not that women don't want to be with guys who treat us well — it's that we don't want to be with a guy who has nothing to say, has no personality or doesn't command respect (especially from us). Occasionally, yes, we fall into the a—hole trap. But that's less about deep-seated masochistic tendencies and more about the fact that sometimes our attraction to confidence gets misguided.

You can be nice and confident at the same time. And actually, since ladies know that guys act like jerks as a way to fake confidence, being nice proves to us that you're comfortable enough not to have to fake it. Be who you really are, and be willing to stand out from the crowd. Show us your interest, but don't give off the impression you'd let us push you around. Showing respect for yourself and consideration to us at the same time is never a bad way to go. Whether online or in person, I promise you, this is the strategy that wins.

NEW KENMORE BISTRO HAS A BIT TOO MUCH HISTORY TO LIVE UP TO

A lot has changed about Kenmore Square in the past decade or so.

That's either a good or a bad thing, depending on your thoughts on gentrification, and how grimy your studded leather jacket was in the '90s. But one thing that has been relatively unsullied by change is the iconic Hotel Buckminster, which has presided over the square since 1897.

Bigger, fancier hotels have moved in — the Hotel Commonwealth kind of sets the tone for the whole neighborhood now — but the Buckminster has long been a reminder of the area's somewhat more ignoble past (and not just for the debauched parties my friends and I used to throw there, or the past few years of sketchy late-night karaoke sung at the hotel's now-defunct Maluken bar).

Fenmore American Bistro, a new bar and restaurant in the same space, hopes to draw on that storied lineage. It was, after all, as the menu at the Fenmore points out, the site of the infamous fixing of the 1919 World Series. Later on, it would be home to a groundbreaking radio station, a holding cell for prisoners of war during WWII, and — more excitingly — the site of the legendary Storyville nightclub in the 1950s, where it hosted everyone from Charles Mingus and Charlie Parker to Billie Holiday. That's a lot of history to live up to. Sadly, it just sort of blends into the crowd now.

If you want wine or beer, but not spirits, Fenmore has you covered. / ERIN BALDASSARI

The new space is a lovely, serviceable bar and restaurant, all clean, sharp lines and inviting creams. It's a cross between a hotel bar, a sports bar and a higher-end cocktail lounge, yet it exists in a limbo of sorts between all three. Fenway-colored prints decorate the walls, and high-backed, comfortable bar seats make for a good perch for one of the TVs, so it's a more sophisticated option for a quick beer before or after the game than a lot of the touristy, over-sized beer halls around the corner.

On the other hand, the lack of a full liquor license stops it from being able to compete with tonier digs nearby, such as The Hawthorne, that better appeal to the more refined drinker and baseball fan's palate. You'd imagine, then, that they'd excel at beer, to compensate for the lack of booze. No such luck. The eight taps are all predictable domestic fair, and the 20-odd bottles are similarly unremarkable, save a few options from Victory and Brooklyn. Four types of Miller on hand though, so, you know, that's something.

That said, the service is exceptionally friendly and the comfortable room makes for a nice respite from the throngs heading to the game. Just don't expect any stories to be told about this place decades down the line.

Debut. Though the name of Duff McKagan's new band may suggest impermanence, he says this is the most accessible group he's ever played in.

When it comes to music, Seattle is the kind of city where everyone knows everyone and, at some point, everyone plays with everyone else. Take Walking Papers, a year-old heavy rock outfit whose self-titled debut album came out on Tuesday. The band includes bassist Duff McKagan (Guns N' Roses, Velvet Revolver), drummer Barrett Martin (Screaming Trees, Mad Season), and — a little less famously — vocalist and guitarist Jeff Angell and keyboardist Benjamin Anderson, both of the band Missionary Position. But, occasionally, local bigwigs like Alice in Chains's Jerry Cantrell and Pearl Jam's Mike McCready (the latter also plays on the album) jump onstage with them.

"It's always gone on," McKagan says of Seattle's band-hopping stew. "I grew up playing in bands here and came back in '93. There's always been this brother and sisterhood thing of sharing gear, no questions asked, and sharing ideas."

Sharing stages

Uproar Fest

Through the summer, Walking Papers are headlining the Uproar Festival's second stage. The tour, headlined by Alice In Chains and Jane's Addiction, is ripe with potential guest guitarists. "We might survive Dave playing I guess," McKagan jokes dryly. "There's a lot of bands on the Uproar tour, so who knows. But Jeff is a competent guitarist. It's a mesmerizing thing as it is."

Walking Papers started last year when Angell and Martin began jamming on the sultry whiskey-soaked blues rock songs that make up the album. Through his longtime friendship with both, McKagan came on board and then Anderson. For all the superstar power, McKagan is realistic about his new band's long-term future.

"This band should be on the radio. It's the most commercial, accessible band I've ever been in," he says. "We have a ton of new songs. The band writes a lot. We're definitely going to do another record. You just cross your fingers and hope."

Baroness: Take my bones away

Metalheads united in a rare moment of emotional synchronicity last summer, when Baroness suffered a terrible touring accident — a bus crash in England that left important bones shattered and important people sidelined.

This isn't that story. This is the story of the difficult aftermath. This is the story of how integrity trumps superficiality. At the time of the crash, the band was a critically acclaimed crossover act whose recently released album "Yellow & Green" had captivated audiences and critics with its powerful and somber melodic muscle.

"The predictability of the album cycle was wrenched away from us, so now the net of safety and predictability is a thing of the past," says Baroness nucleus John Baizley. "I think most people have made up their minds on whether they like the album at this point. And things have changed — in terms of lineup, in terms of perspective. This tour is in gratitude to our fans who continued to pay attention to us all while we were out of commission momentarily."

Baizley's run with Baroness has seen a number of lineup changes. With this tour, fans will see a completely new rhythm section as drummer Allen Blickle and bassist Matt Maggioni recover from the accident. "We've just lost two members, so 50 percent of our sound has changed. So in some ways, we've taken a very big step in a different direction, musically speaking. And I think the important thing is to embrace that. That's the new existence, and you work therein." JIM FENNER

'Rooms: A Rock Romance'

Aug. 10-27
Calderwood Pavilion, Boston Center for the Arts
527 Tremont St., Boston
$18, 617-933-8600
www.bostontheatrescene.com
Set in the late 1970s, this musical by Paul Scott Goodman tells the story of Monica and Ian, two Glaswegian musicians who form a creative and romantic relationship that takes them first to London and then New York, where punk is just beginning to become a thing. But after all they've been through, will their clashing personalities finally drive them apart?

This family reggae act is one of the few bands that gets more legit as its members age, having distanced themselves from the pop concessions of their 1994 MCA debut "Miracles" and cultivating a more roots-y sound after moving to an indie label. The band's shared blood gives Morgan Heritage especially close harmonies and a natural cohesion as a band that is a joy to witness.

Cambridge Philharmonic

Aug. 9, 8 p.m.
Lily Pad
1353 Cambridge St., Cambridge
$10, 617-395-1393

This unique show, situated somewhere between chamber concert and cabaret, features a performance of Arnold Schoenberg's haunting, beautiful and somewhat bipolar sextet "Transfigured Nights," Randy Bauer's jazzy piece "Whirligigs and Gewgaws" and a guest spot from singer-guitarist Vavá, performing Beck's 2012 Song Reader project with the Cambridge Philharmonic's strings.

489 Mass. Ave., Cambridge
www.ticketweb.com
This monster show is packed with eight of Boston's finest and fuzziest rock bands: Ghost Box Orchestra, New Highway Hymnal, CreaturoS, Guillermo Sexo, Moniker, the Fagettes, Nice Guys and Doze. You simply cannot be a local indie rock fan without knowing and loving all these bands, so come see 'em all in one place before the rest of the country catches wind.

Continuing their summer series of concerts championing some lesser-known Romantic composers, the Boston Chamber Music Society will perform works by Bennett and Thomson, two Englishmen, teachers as well as composers, who spent time in Germany befriending Schumann and Mendelssohn—whose dramatic Piano Trio in D Minor, a major hit in its time, closes out the program.

Billy Wilder's 1950 masterpiece stands as the definitive piece of Hollywood gothic, depicting an aging silent film star's tragic decent into madness with noir cool. Few movies have the guts this one does in starting with the ending — a corpse floating face down in a swimming pool — concerning itself not with what will happen, but how and why.

FESTIVALS

What's better than a smorgasbord of locally made street food deliciousness including Indian samosas, Brazilian barbecue, Salvadoran pupusas and good old American Popsicles? How about throwing in some fire jugglers and belly dancers? Add to this a bevy of artisans peddling their wares and the release of a brand new book on Union Square food, and you got yourself a lovely high-summer fest.

In Brookline, once more, with flavor

Olé! El Centro's second location adds a splash of color to a sleepy village.

Frida Kahlo is a permanent guest at El Centro Dos. / ERIN BALDASSARI

It might seem like an odd place to begin a restaurant review, but the bathroom at El Centro's new location, El Centro Dos, bears mentioning. Its design — a toilet painted with a desert scene complete with cacti; some kind of joke about sitting on a cactus, perhaps? — is indicative of the Mexican restaurant's attention to stylistic detail and its artsy, evocative aesthetic.

A couple of years ago, Brookline resident Allan Rodriguez opened El Centro in the South End, to great success. This second restaurant honoring his homeland, Mexico, opened this summer, bringing a chic café/cantina to sleepy Brookline Village. Though it doesn't rival the bathroom's bohemian Baja splendor, the dining room is similarly artsy and organic, with brick, wood and the likeness of patron saint of free Mexico, Ms. Frida Kahlo, staring aloofly into the ether from a far wall.

Food comes fast and you're soon scooping up guacamole — theirs is sprinkled liberally with queso — with some of the crispest tortilla chips this side of the border. As with most dishes at Dos, salt is an afterthought, allowing for subtle, but real flavor. Go for a simple salsa verde-topped enchilada stuffed with grilled asparagus and corn and served with rice and beans, or plump fish tacos (though, sadly, they did not arrive in the wheat tortillas the menu promised). Or, choose one of the more sophisticated dishes such as salmon molcajetes, which is served on a lava stone and is deliciously gooey, with loads of melted queso.

For dessert, there's the ubiquitous flan — aka Mexican crème caramel — and Dos' is scrumptious. Dense and sticky, but served with a mean portion of fresh blueberries and bits of strawberry, it's a better version of the standard Mexican dessert than most. With a bit more fruit, it might have rivaled the bathroom in color.

Q RESTAURANT

The thrill of hot pot is the sheer volume of it; huge, boiling vats of oil-slicked broth plunked down in the middle of the table for à la minute cooking, with heaps of freshly carved meat, vegetables, seafood—the sky's the limit, here—spread out all around it. And at Q Restaurant, hot pot is at its very best. Even the sauce (which you create yourself from an assortment of fresh herbs, oils, vinegars, and a healthy heap of garlic) is larger-than-life, coating every bite with a customized zing. Hot pot opens your eyes to the true meaning of smorgasbord, of feasting, of joyous excess and chowing down communally.

Horoscope

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.
You're likely to be luckiest in matters pertaining to your financial affairs, especially if you're looking out for others in the process.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.
An important, influential contact upon whom you've made a good impression is ready to help you achieve important goals. Don't be reluctant to accept help.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.
Even though your focus might be devoted to a specific objective, there is a very good chance that you could achieve many other successes, as well.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
Associates are likely to admire and respect your perspectives and opinions, mostly because they'll sense a certain light about you. It's called optimism.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Joint ventures look better than usual for you today. Even if you're already involved in a collective endeavor, your chances for expanding on this involvement have greater promise.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20.
Because your judgment is so keen right now, the conclusions you draw should be exceptionally good ones. You're not apt to overlook anything crucial.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18.
If you're performing a service for financial remuneration, the pay could turn out to be rather generous. This is because it will be in proportion to the quality of your work.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.
A partnership could turn out to be an exceptionally good one in terms of your social life. There will be more to this alliance than meets the eye.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.
Certain necessary tasks can be easily accomplished today, but could become a problem if you put them off. Make every effort to do them now.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.
You will be better than usual at seeing all the positive things that life has to offer. This winning attitude will generate some remarkable developments.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.
You're likely to be much luckier with financial matters today than you will be tomorrow, so if you're smart, you'll do what you can to make lots of hay while the sun is shining.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.
Certain plans can now be expanded, producing greater personal advantages than even you dared hope. This is not a day to be hesitant to think big.

Land of the free pass, home of the knave

Re: 'Don't let one bad spot spoil the whole fruit' (Metro, Aug. 5) I'm stunned! In any other universe, Eliot Spitzer would be a misogynistic creep who exploits women, but in this universe he is just "doin' what comes naturally." Can you spell "double standard," boys and girls? Let's not forget how Spitzer was found out — an alert bank employee recognized the money-laundering techniques he was using to cover up his payments to the prostitute. MONEY LAUNDERING! Not to mention that he invited himself to a congressional hearing to have an excuse for the taxpayers to pick up the tab for his travel to D.C. for a liaison. (Oh, and aren't both prostitution and patronizing a prostitute crimes?)

All this from the "Sheriff of Wall Street." The hypocrisy is palpable. I realize a ham sandwich could get elected in NYC as long as it runs as a Democrat, but I hope the voters will be a little more discerning in this election.

Re: 'Who will be the next Batman?' (Metro, Aug. 5) I think the person who should seriously play Batman has to be Bradley Cooper. Gosling and Goode probably wouldn't be the right fits because seeing them in a costume like that would probably be just as sickening. Brolin may be a good candidate as well, but I think Cooper has the assets to play the famed vigilante. If not him, try Mark Wahlberg or Matt Damon. They could probably bring in more dough and more fans to the movie industry. Whatever the studios choose, they should probably consider these guys as legitimate candidates.

Football finally front and center for Patriots

NFL. The Patriots are happy to get back to basics this Friday as they take on the Eagles in Philly.

After the offseason the New England Patriots had, playing any game — preseason or not — is a welcomed change.

On Aug. 9 (7:30 p.m., WBZ-TV 4), the talk surrounding the Pats won't be about murder charges, or in the Eagles' case, derogatory name-calling.

It'll be about Tom Brady (if he plays) — and then Ryan Mallett and Tim Tebow — and how they look with the team's new wide receivers.

It'll also be about the Patriots' secondary — a secondary that has given up more than its fair share of yards over the years, but one that hopes to finally rebound with a full season of Aqib Talib as the team's No. 1 corner, and the addition of proven veteran safety Adrian Wilson.

The first week of preseason action is the first real test for players that have received lots of hype in camp.

Two players on offense that have created early buzz went undrafted — wide receiver Kenbrell Thompkins and tight end Zach Sudfeld.

Thompkins' speed and footwork have drawn rave reviews from those who have seen him in action, and at 25 years old, is not your average undeveloped rookie. Sudfeld, meanwhile, stands at 6-foot-7, 255 pounds, and with Rob Gronkowski still out and Jake Ballard getting off to a slow start, there's a big opportunity for Sudfeld to show his stuff against the Eagles.

And don't forget the receivers who were drafted in Aaron Dobson and Josh Boyce. Dobson has had an impressive camp so far.

"They're working hard. We're getting better," Brady said of his receivers. "You know, it will be good to go up against some new people and see how they do. I think it's a hard working group. They're smart. They're out there every day and they're improving."

The same can be said for New England's now 4-3 defense, though Belichick is on record as saying the 4-3 and 3-4 really don't differ much.

Plenty of eyes will be on rookie linebacker Jamie Collins, the team's first selection in the 2013 draft, and it will be interesting to see how quickly second-year defensive end Chandler Jones makes the jump.

Tom Brady threw just seven passes in the 2012 preseason opener against the Saints. Ryan Mallett threw 19 balls that day and former backup Brian Hoyer threw 15. Brady sat out last year's preseason game against Philly.

Live from Philly

Pats' defense ready to hit for real

After two days of playing patty-cake with Eagles quarterbacks Michael Vick and Nick Foles, the Patriots' defense is ready to hit someone for real.

"Yeah, I'm sick of tagging off," said Rob Ninkovich. "I'm ready to wrap up and take someone to the ground."

Vince Wilfork, who finds himself the senior member of Bill Belichick's defense in his 10th season, says it comes with the territory.

"You just have to know how to be a professional," the 31-year-old Wilfork said following practice in Philly on Aug. 7. "I always try to practice smart. We don't go 'full go' and take down ... But on game day, everything's live. You can go through your progressions and make tackles. You can be a little more aggressive, bump guys and be physical on game days." JON MARKS
